About CNM	13

As needs grow in North Texas, so do the number of nonprofits. Unfortunately, having more nonprofits has not translated into slowing the growth of most issues in our community. This raises questions about the current nonprofit ecosystem, what's working and not working, and what changes are needed for these organizations and other stakeholders to operate more efficiently and effectively to better address increasing demand.

As a first step to build awareness about this community dynamic, we decided to update a report CNM generated over five years ago entitled The State of the Nonprofit Sector 2012 which provided statistics about the number of nonprofits in North Texas as well as giving trends among foundations. The 2018 report is primarily focused on the number of public charities by county, area of service, and size by assets and income. For most categories, these statistics are compared to 2011 data to show the degree of growth. As you will see, the numbers are staggering with approximately 26% growth among public charities since 2012 (from 18,607 to 23,436 organizations) and with only 5% having an operating budget of more than $1M.

With this report, we present the statistics but we won't stop there. Starting this summer, we will be launching a new series of articles designed to provide a greater understanding of the challenges and contributing factors, and offer ideas to slow the rate of growth of issues in our community. On an ongoing basis, we will also be updating the statistics annually in January starting in 2019.

We look forward to partnering with you for a stronger community.

TYPE OF ORGANIZATIONS

GEOGRAPHIC FOCUS

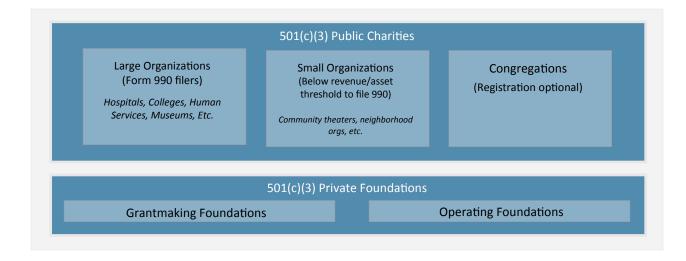

AND SCOPE

TIMEERAME

We identified public charities by referring to the Internal Revenue Code which specifies more than 30 different types of tax exempt organizations. The largest group is 501(c)(3) public charities, and includes organizations in arts, education, healthcare, and social services as well as community foundations, universities, and hospitals. The tax-exempt sector also includes a variety of other groups identified as nonprofits such as labor unions, business and professional associations, fraternal societies, state chartered credit unions, and many more. However, for purposes of the statistics referenced in this report, we are focused on nonprofits that are 501(c)(3) public charities only as defined in the chart below.

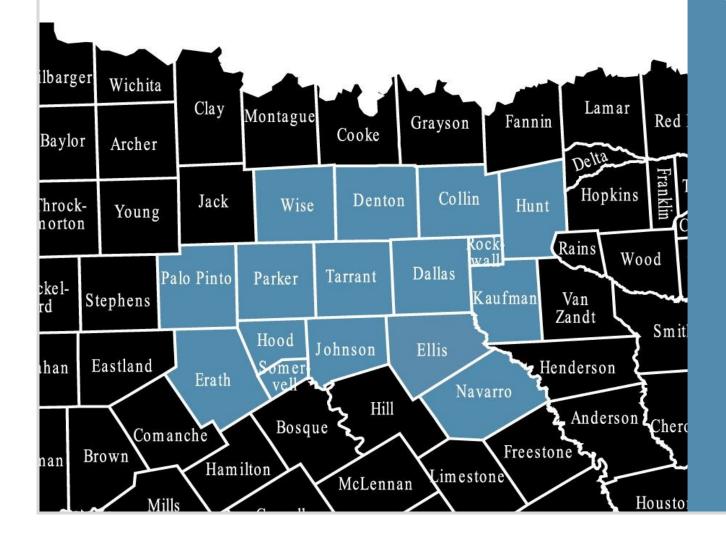

The primary focus of this report is the number of public charities in North Texas, by county, for the following categories: total registered, areas of service, and amount of assets and income. To put this information into context, comparisons are made to public charities in Texas for these categories, and in the case of total registered, data for US nonprofits is also presented. Additionally, statistics are provided about public charities by income range but only for Texas since that was the only data available.

To show trends, numbers for most categories are reported for both 2011 and 2016, with 2016 being the most recent data available. Per accounting convention, negative values are expressed in parenthesis.

North Texas is defined by a region, a sixteen county grouping that makes up the North Central Texas Council of Governments: Collin, Dallas, Denton, Ellis, Erath, Hood, Hunt, Johnson, Kaufman, Navarro, Palo Pinto, Parker, Rockwall, Somervell, Tarrant, and Wise.<sup>2</sup>

REGISTERED NONPROFITS AND PUBLIC CHARITIES: US, TEXAS, AND NORTH TEXAS COUNTIES

According to the 2016 data, there are 23,436 registered 501(c)(3) public charities in the 16 counties that make up North Texas, up from 18,607 in 2011. The number of public charities in North Texas has grown almost 26% since 2011, outpacing the rest of the state in its growth of nonprofit organizations.<sup>3</sup> It should be noted that this growth occurred despite the fact that between 2011 and 2016, 15,816 501(c)(3) organizations in the entirety of Texas had their nonprofit tax statuses automatically revoked by the Internal Revenue Service (IRS).<sup>4</sup>

Across the country, the number of nonprofits has jumped since 2011. Nationally, more than 1.58 million nonprofit organizations are registered with the IRS, up about 9% from five years previous.<sup>5</sup>

Of the 16 counties of North Texas, Dallas continues to have the most registered nonprofits with almost 43%, followed by Tarrant County at 25%. The number of nonprofits and public charities is growing faster in North Texas than in the rest of the state, and faster in Texas than the national average.<sup>6</sup>

In 2011, public charities represented about 69% of registered nonprofit organizations in Texas. In 2016, that segment grew to 75%. In North Texas, public charities represented 71% of all registered nonprofits in 2011 and 75% in 2016. In North Texas, Hood County has had the largest spurt in growth in the number of public charities at just over 48% growth in 5 years, followed by Collin, Ellis, and Kaufman counties.8

AREAS OF SERVICE OF PUBLIC CHARITIES: TEXAS AND NORTH TEXAS COUNTIES

Public charities in the United States serve a diverse range of missions. In North Texas, the majority of these public charities work in religion-related, human services and education mission spaces. These organizations are coded according to the NTEE (also known as the National Taxonomy of Exempt Entities) classification system, into 26 major groups under 10 "broad" categories.<sup>11</sup>

INCOME RANGE OF PUBLIC CHARITIES: TEXAS

Approximately 95% of all public charities in Texas had an operating budget less than \$1 million both in 2011 and 2016. While there was almost a 60% drop of about 20,000 public charities reporting less than \$100,000 in operating revenue from 2011 to 2016, there was growth in all other income ranges. It is interesting to note that an additional 33,000 public charities did not report income at all in 2016 compared to 2011.  $^{\rm 20}$
